INFORMATION ON ANONYMOUS EGG RECEPTION

Dear Madam, dear partner

This information is intended to explain the procedure of anonymous egg reception, so that you can consent in full knowledge of the facts. Your treating doctor of the Leuven university fertility centre (LUFC) is prepared to answer all your questions regarding this treatment.

Egg reception procedure

Eggs retrieved from an anonymous donor will be fertilised with sperm after their removal by aspiration from the donor. The resultant embryos can be implanted either during the same cycle or after freezing and thawing.

Purpose of egg reception

The purpose of the treatment is to achieve a pregnancy by fertilising the egg(s) donated by an anonymous donor with sperm, after which the fertilised egg is implanted in the receptor.

Risks of egg reception

As with any medical fertility treatment, egg reception does not guarantee pregnancy. In general, ten to twenty percent of pregnancies may end in a miscarriage, and complications can occur during any pregnancy, including in pregnancies after egg reception. Compared to other pregnancies after assisted reproductive technology, there are no significantly higher risks associated with pregnancy after egg reception. The transfer of more than one embryo can result in a multiple pregnancy, which involves a higher risk of premature contractions and premature birth, increased blood pressure, reduced birth weight and so on. The number of embryos implanted is determined by mutual agreement between the prospective parents, the embryologist and the doctor.

In the general population, a certain percentage (around 3%) of children are born with a physical or mental abnormality. This can also occur after egg reception. The occurrence of such abnormalities is beyond medical control. All egg donors will be tested for infectious diseases such as HIV, cytomegaly virus, hepatitis, chlamydia and syphilis. Because fresh eggs will be used, no absolute certainty can be offered regarding the absence of such infectious diseases, as a certain period of time may elapse between the infection and the possibility of detecting the virus in the blood. The procedure of egg reception therefore involves a minimal risk of sexually transmitted diseases such as gonorrhoea, syphilis, herpes, hepatitis and AIDS, despite all precautionary measures taken to prevent them. The LUFC will not accept any liability for any such conditions that may occur or for their treatment.

Financial aspects of egg reception

Per cycle a fixed fee will be charged to cover the costs of the egg donor (hospitals costs, travel expenses, absence from work, etc.)

A cost estimate can be found at www.uzleuven.be/kostenraming under Gynaecology and Obstetrics.

Consequences of egg reception

From the moment of insemination of the donated gametes, the parentage rules set out in the Civil Code favour the prospective parents who have received the gametes.

Gamete donors cannot institute legal claims concerning parentage or associated issues relating to financial assets. Likewise, the receptors of gametes and the child born as a result of insemination may not institute legal claims concerning parentage or associated issues relating to financial assets against the donor(s) of gametes (Art. 56 of the Law of 6 July 2007 on assisted reproductive technology and the use of surplus embryos and gametes).

The LUFC will take the necessary measures to protect the anonymity of both donor and receptor.

They declare that they have received sufficient information to give their consent to the LUFUC to proceed with egg reception.
- From the moment of insemination of the donated gametes, the parentage rules set out in the Civil Code favour the prospective parents who have received the gametes. - The prospective parents are aware of the medical risks of egg reception. They will therefore accept all responsibility for the physical and mental condition of any child born after egg reception, and they will not claim any responsibility or blame to all persons actively or passively involved in this process or to any technical procedure used. In addition, they undertake to report any congenital/hereditary abnormality to the LUFUC immediately, including any such abnormality that might be identified at a later age.

This amount is 2.373,43 euros on 1 January 2018. This amount will be adjusted on the 1st of January each year in line with the health index (<http://statbel.fgov.be/nl/statistieken/cijfers/economie/consumptieprijzen/gezondheidsindex>) in December of the preceding year.
